The City of Peking, although getting pid, is still a fine vessel. It may be mentioned that her masts and yards carry sufficient sail to have enabled her to reach port and the accident occurred in the open As Captain J. Tremains Smith explained, it is not the first time that such an accident has betalten the ship. Some three years ago she broke her tail shaft and sailed under canvas for fifteen hundred miles across the cific, but in the narrow waters of the Inland Sea such a course would have been dangerous. In answer to inquiries. Captain Smith said the accordant occurred on Sunday morning about three miles the north of Imabaru, and the first enowledge those on board had of any hing having occurred was the slowing down and stoppage of the vessel When the nature of the accident was discovered, she was allowed to drift with the tide until a sale anchorage was reached, and as soon as postible a telegram was dispatched to the engine room as if the boat was grounding, but no sound was heard by those on deck. Besides the tweeter cable pas sengers, the vessel carried the Chinese crew of the company's new liner Korea. In referring our reporter to the chief engineer for technical details
